VII. Introduction of School Psychologist (Perfectionism & Growth Mindset)

Presenter: Rosemary Glean, Ed.S., L.P.C., School Psychologist

Discussion: Guest speaker, Rosemary Glean, presented on the topic of perfectionism and growth mindset and its impact on children. She discussed the complex nature of perfectionism, its definitions, and its impact on individuals. Perfectionistic children are complex and have unique characteristics. She highlighted that while perfectionism may be rewarded in society, it can lead to adverse consequences such as inflexibility and a lack of openness to new experiences. Ms. Glean presented perfectionism indicators in children including self-oriented perfectionism, other-oriented perfectionism, and socially prescribed perfectionism. She shared personal anecdotes and research findings to illustrate these indicators including longing for safety/security, conditional self-worth, fear of failure, constantly under pressure, chronic self-evaluation, social comparison, absence of positive view of self, a tendency to engage in self-defeating behaviors, burnout and fatigue, and emotional perfectionism. She emphasized the important of recognizing these traits in children to provide appropriate support and interventions.

Ms. Glean additionally presented strategies to foster a growth mindset (vs. fixed mindset) and reduce perfectionism. She outlined ten real-life strategies that can be carried out in the home and/or at school, including (1) reframe mistakes as learning opportunities, (2) model imperfection, (3) celebrate effort, not just outcomes (4) “mistake of the day” ritual, (5) teach the word “yet,” (6) small risk challenges, (7) use process-oriented questions, (8) create a “bravery board,” (9) shift self-talk, and (10) parent modeling of self-kindness. Practicing mindfulness is a bonus strategy.

Ms. Glean opened the discussion up for questions. She provided additional resources and support for parents interested in further exploring these concepts.

VIII. Principal’s Coffee Talk

Presenter: Jay Bland, Principal

Mr. Bland presented Morris Brandon’s performance data and discussed the school’s strategic plan to improve student outcomes. The conversation concluded with a review of the school’s financial health, including new teacher hires and the importance of maintaining student enrollment to avoid potential budget issues and school closures.

Principal Bland presented a comprehensive review of Morris Brandon’s performance data, focusing on the Georgia Milestones scores from 2024-2025. The school showed mixed results, with third grade achieving growth in proficiency while fourth and fifth grades remained stagnant. Principal Bland highlighted the need to improve outcomes for various student subgroups. He presented growth percentile data for students who tested the year prior, noting that 40-60 is typical/average growth, with 50-60 being higher and anything under 40 or 60 being lower. The school’s overall ELA growth percentile was 55.4%, with math being slightly lower. The school is working on creating individual subgroup plans for students who need additional support. Principal Bland also discussed CCRPI targets, explaining that because the school performed well last year, their targets increased, and some subgroups such as our highest needs populations did not meet their targets. Furthermore, the principal highlighted Morris Brandon’s strong showing in MAP scores and growth metrics. He discussed key performance indicators set by the district for 2030, including targets for third grade ELA proficiency and subgroup performance. Priorities are ranked and the plan is posted on the website. He encouraged parents to share their thoughts on the data and trends and appreciation for feedback and concerns.

The principal discussed the school’s financial health, highlighting the hiring of two hourly intervention teachers, three (EE) exceptional education teachers, and a full-time non-instructional paraprofessional. He emphasized the importance of maintaining student enrollment.

Principal Bland addressed the Long Range Facilities Plan, noting that Morris Brandon is no longer included in the current round of discussions about combining dual campuses. He encouraged community support (i.e., volunteering on school tours, sharing school information with preschools) as well as positive messaging to attract families to the school. Public Meetings will be held on October 20, 2025 and November 10, 2025, virtual at noon and in-person at 6:00 PM at 130 Trinity Avenue.

Further, Principal Bland provided school contacts information, including administrative support emails.
